BAD NEGRO SHOOTS UP CONFLUENCE; HE TERRORIZES TOWNHolds Up Bartenders and Beats a Woman in Squire's Office.*STREETS LIGHTS HIS TARGET

Constable Burnworth and Posse Make Capture by Holding Bonkelle and Getting Drop on Him While He Slept; Citizens Dodge His Bullets.

Charged with carrying concealed weapons, wantonly and maliciously pointing firearms, and many of his heinous, Frank Johnson, aged 46, probably the most vicious negro ever arrested in the county, was lodged in jail at Somerset yesterday, on a commitment issued by Justice of the Peace G. C. Groff of Confluence, where he terrorized the people of the town. Among the depredations he committed was the severe beating of a colored woman in the office of Squire Groff. He also drove people from the streets and demanded and received drinks at will in the saloons by holding up the bar employees at the point of a revolver.

When finally arrested, he lamented the loss of his freedom, because he had not killed anybody with it. He stabbed a colored woman in the hand with a pocket knife when she resisted an attack upon her and threatened to kill practically everybody he met on the streets in Confluence. Johnson was just recently released from a three-year term in the penitentiary. He said his bars have served numerous other sentences.

Just before closing time Tuesday night Johnson entered the bar of the Riverside Hotel at Confluence and drawing his revolver in a menacing manner commanded all the patrons of the establishment to make a hasty retreat for the safe rooms. He then demanded a number of bottles of beer and other liquors and withdrew merrily boasting of his "hand."

He had the police officers cowed by this time and as he walked along the street he kept up a steady fusillade from his gun, driving everybody into alleys or buildings. Many of the bullets penetrated windows along the street while others were imbedded in the walls of houses. A particular hobby of the negro was making targets of electric light bulbs and arc lamps. He finally arrived at his den in the "seven-hour row" after commanding the liquor and women known as "black bude" retired for the night.

Early yesterday Constable Alvin Burnworth and a posse surprised Johnson by entering his home while he was asleep. He was covered by half a dozen revolvers and roused from his slumbers.

Earlier in the day he plotted the office of Justice Groff, whom he attacked. The justice, being without a weapon, was powerless to defend himself. The negro had beaten up a colored woman named Ada Jeffries, who was visiting "Black Bud." The Jeffries woman was in Justice Groff's office for the purpose of swearing out an information charging Johnson with assault and battery with intent to kill when they were suddenly taken away from the scene. He hurried Squire Groff aside when the negro attempted to press his case in the office, and proceeded to brutally attack the woman. The woman rallied and Johnson again attacked her. Justice Groff made a leap for the door in an effort to summon assistance, but was preceded by the negro who quickly blocked the only exit from the room.

His actions finally exhausted the giant negro's strength somewhat and the woman managed to get out through the door. She sought refuge in the jewelry store of David Ashby. She was followed by Johnson, who inflicted an ugly slash in her right hand with a pocket knife. The woman succeeded in reaching the rear of the building which she occupied across the street but the Ashby family as she entered a room she started the door in the negro's face and made herself of the bolt it on the inside. Ashby quickly secured a revolver with which he drove Johnson from the premises.

FIRE BELL TOLLS IN EMPTY CHURCH; HOAX DISCOVERED.

Special to The Courier.

VANDERHILL, Nov. 20.—The fire department was called out early yesterday morning by the tolling of the bell in the Methodist church. No trace of fire could be found, and a search of the building failed to reveal the bell-ringer.

One of the firemen climbed into the tower and found a rope tied to the clapper. It led to the outside of the tower and was several hundred feet long. By the time the investigators reached the end of the rope the jester had disappeared.

YOU GH BRIDGE IN NEED OF REPAIRS, CITIZENS VIEWS

Not Getting Attention It Deserves When Owed by a Private Corporation; Urge Action.

The story to effect that several experienced men who examined the condition of the Young bridge, found that the structure is very much in need of repair to make it absolutely safe, has aroused much discussion. A number of men here since expressed themselves along the same lines.

At least one of the new councilmen has declared his intention of getting after the county commissioners about the matter. When a toll bridge, owned by individuals, is painted regularly and given needed repairs from time to time, however, the county took it over.

In 1907 very little work has been done on it. Last week a well known iron man asked one of the commissioners to go over it with him but the official has not yet found time to do so.

J. R. Bixler of the West Penn, declares that he has been observing the bridge for a number of years and always in a somewhat relieved when one of the heavy trolley cars passes over safety on an unusually heavy number of people cross it with our mishap. He believes that the main structure of the bridge is just as unsafe as the sidewalk, and that one of the bows is likely to go down any time, because proper repairs have not been made.

Mr. Bixler points out that in case of collapse, there is not another county bridge over the Young between Dawson and Ontonagon, a distance of over 20 miles.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Sults II
Back Hurts or Bladder Burdens.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sick; the eliminative tissues clog and the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pain in the back or the urine is cloudy full of sediment, or the bladder aches, it is time to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headache, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salt; take a tablespoonful in $\frac{1}{2}$ glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will be fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for centuries to flush out and eliminate clogged kidneys so neutralizes the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation thus ending uterine and bladder disorders.

Jad Salt is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithiater drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.—Adv.

SLACK AND SLACK METHODS.

The announcement that the Baltimore & Ohio railroad bridge over Laurel Hill will be in danger of being washed away because the slack coal with which it was once filled has caught fire and cannot be extinguished, is a striking illustration of the reckless manner in which our pioneer progressives sacrificed the country's rich natural resources.

It is stated that a great deal of slack was used for ballast about this time, that is to say in the 'sixties, and it is a fact that for many years slack coal was given away. It was piled in great mountains at every coal tipple on the Monongahela and the Conemaugh rivers, just as the miners and their families were piling up the black cinders banks of the anthracite regions. This latter has since been carefully gone over again with promoter machinery and a large portion of it recovered at an immense gain in dollars.

In the Pittsburgh district, the old slack piles not otherwise dissipated have long ago disintegrated in the weather. Nothing was ever recovered from them but the lesson of their tolls. Slack coal has always commanded a price above that of coke, however, and the mighty growth of our many industries and the constant demand for power to run them, slack coal in the base of much of this industrial energy.

The railroad builders of the decade following the Civil War reversed the present rule of railroad construction. They did not build for the future; they built for the present. It was a feverish race to get down a line of rails which would stand the weight of a locomotive and a train. Tracks were invariably laid on a mud grade, full of ballast. The work of completing the track was left to the gravel trains.

This is the reason why some portions of track are still under construction and reconstruction.

TOURIST MANNERS.

The tourists who gave freely of his money and robed him of his only threatened with incarceration. In the convention coke oven at Davyton, was a patient man and slow to anger, but he thought of that coke oven made him hot and he lost no time in recording an official complaint against the three sons of Ham who had been so singularly lacking in gratitude and hospitality.

Public sentiment is with him. The Connellsville people insist that tourists visiting our great industries shall be treated with courtesy, and as much charity as possible; and further that they shall observe the same rule of conduct among themselves.

The parole theory is being thoroughly tested out in Fayette county. Two men who have already paid out bonds in a majority of the cases, where it will repeat to the better side of the conflict nature, but in some cases it will undoubtedly be a bold mockery of justice.

The Democratic administration is threatened with an Navajo Indian outbreak. Is this a Mexican diversion or a rebellion against the Turf of Navajo blankets?

Over in France, when a writer is challenged to fight a duel because of his writings, he engages a good friend who is a good swordsman to fight for him. This is a fine arrangement. Every first-class newspaper office should be equipped with a duel fighter. He doesn't need any cutters, however, just a couple of handy bats.

When the tongue involves the wedding ceremony it looks as if it had come to stay.

Traffic blocked by freight wrecks is nothing to be an old story in the coke region, but perhaps there will be more room for the passenger train to run now that the Wilson bill is in running order.

Young blood is all right in the Chamber of Commerce, but the results of one and occasionally some of its financial backing are mighty helpful in running a Chamber of Commerce successfully.

Wilson won't recognize Carranza, Carranza won't recognize Huerta; and now Huerta won't recognize Wilson. Notwithstanding the outward desire to return to normalcy, there isn't an think any of them is not willing to know about the plans of the other.

The proposed reduction in telephone rates will not affect the independent telephone rates are now about as low as the law. The lines were all built for competition, and hence for the most part maintained their competitive rates.

Some of the enterprising persons who are making a precarious living by stealing wire from the B. & O. premises in Connellsville will if given time enough enmesh themselves in the wires of the law.

EXPERT PREDICTS GREAT FUTURE FOR
BY-PRODUCT COKE

E. W. Parker Believes 11
Will Equal Half Total Output In Decade.

SUBMITS INTERESTING FIGURES

Connellsville Operators Not Worrying, However, Because Area of Coal Containing Characteristics of High Grade Coking Fuel Is Very Limited.

The revolution in coke making which has been under way since 1905, continues to gain ground at a remarkable rate, rapidly approaching the coke-making process. It looks very much as if Edward W. Parker hit the nail squarely on the head some time ago, when he predicted that before the close of the present decade more than half of the coke manufactured in this country will be from retort ovens, says the Iron Trade Review.

Owners of blast furnaces, founders and operators of beehive oven plants are closely watching this revolution, which Mr. Parker describes as a substitution of retort ovens for the waste-beehive type and a noticeable shifting of the coke-making industry from the source of coal supply to the coke-producing manufacturing centers. The demand exists not only for coke, but for gas, tar, ammonia and other by-products.

Mr. Parker's report on "The Manufacture of Coke in 1912," issued by the United States Geological Survey, is of particular interest to the iron and steel industry, especially at this time, when the subject of the future coke prices is being discussed in all quarters of the country.

"In 1912 as in 1911," Mr. Parker writes, "the most significant feature of the coke-making industry is the continued increase of the coke produced by the construction of retort or by-product ovens and the increase in the production of retort oven coke. The number of retort ovens in operation increased from 4,621 in 1911 to 5,211 in 1912, a gain of 587, whereas the total number of all ovens decreased from 103,579 to 102,230, indicating that there were 2,235 fewer beehive ovens in existence in 1912 than in 1911. Some of the new ovens of the beehive type were built in 1912, but the number abandoned was greater than the new ones by 5,919, which represented the decrease in the total number of ovens."

There was a general increase in production of both beehive and retort oven coke, the former by 18.7 per cent and the latter by 41.6 per cent. The output of the retort ovens which represented less than 5 per cent of the total number of ovens, was a little more than 25 per cent of the total. In 1911, the retort oven contributed 22.07 per cent of the total."

At the beginning of this year, the 21st year in the history of by-product coke making in this country, 753 retort ovens were under construction, 55 more than were being built at the beginning of the preceding year. At present, however, there have been 100 ovens built in 10 months.

"Of the 42,682,639 short tons of coke made in the United States in 1912," Mr. Parker continues, "22,585,425 tons were beehive or oven coke, valued at $69,103,746, and 11,115,164 tons, valued at $12,932,920, were 160% or by-product coke." Compared with figures for the preceding year, the production of oven coke, in 1912, increased 5,164,721 tons, or 18.7 per cent, while that of retort coke increased 3,267,319 tons, or 41.6 per cent. The percentage of by-product coke to the total output increased from 15.91 in 1911 to 17.42 in 1912, and from 25.21 in 1911 to 25.23 in 1912. Mr. Parker quotes:

"The furnace of the beehive oven type sold at a much lower figure than by-product coke. The average price of 'oven' coke during the past five years was $4.85, as against an average of $2.50 for by-product coke.

The question of freight rates entered into the ultimate cost to the consumer, and benefits derived from lower rates would tend to reduce the relatively high cost of by-product coke.

That the coke-making industry is shifting, is clearly shown by the change in the size of the coke-producing centers. In 1912, Indiana advanced from fourth to third place, while West Virginia was relegated to fourth place. Mr. Parker says: "In 1910, Indiana was only seventeenth in the list, the advance in the last two years being due principally to the opening of the 560 Koppers ovens by the United States Steel Corporation at Gary." West Virginia dropped from second to third place in 1911, but that state is furnishing coal for by-product coke ovens in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. Pennsylvania continues to lead the list.

The increased interest and activity in the development of retort-oven practice in the United States certainly tends to bear out Mr. Parker's statement regarding the revolution in the coke-making industry. Coke operators in the Connellsville region are not too worried, however. They take the stand that there always will be sufficient demand for high grade "oven" coke, and contend that developments the last few years indicate a comparatively restricted area of high grade coke coal of Connellsville's characteristics. This area is much undivided compared with the fields in competition in this country. The two, it is argued, that entirely new demands may spring up for "oven" coke before the end of the decade.

George E. Zeller Formerly of Scottsdale and Connells-ville Called.

Y. M. C. A. BENEFIT TONIGHT

A Change in the Cast of "Golden Goblet," a Local Talent Play; A Patient Brought Home from the Hospital; Other Notes of News.

SPECIAL TO THE COURIER.
SCOTTSDALE, Nov. 20.—A telephone message from Glassport gave the startling news of the sudden death of another former Scottsdale man in the passing of George E. Zeller, who died from heart failure, while awaiting a train to go to his home at Donora, on Tuesday evening. Mr. Zeller was one of the first members of the Y. M. C. A. Club of Scottsdale and was here last week on business, apparently, in the best of health. He was a son of Michael and Margaret (Rutledge) Zeller and was born at Broadtop, Huntingdon county, May 10, 1886, and was one of 11 children, one of them, a brother, James, of Scottsdale, and a sister, Mary, wife of John M. Connor.

Mr. Zeller was reared on the farm and when he was 16 years of age left home to enter the coal mining business in New Britain. He then took up the blacksmith trade in New Baltimore, and later worked at Latrobe, Connellsville and Scottsdale. In 1906 he opened a large wagon and carriage making shop on North Broadway, Scottsdale, operating for six years. He owned liveries, stables and other business enterprises here for several years, and ran a shooting gallery in Connellsville a year or two ago. Last fall he moved to New Kensington and from there to Donora. He married Rose Ann Hough, daughter of Washington Hough of Keatington, L. A., and added the yellow leaves three children, Cyril Thomas, Ellen Mary and Florence Catherine. They are members of St. John's the Baptist Roman Catholic Church. Mr. Zeller was a Democrat in politics and was a member of the C. R. and B. A. of Scottsdale and of the Eagles and of the H. P. O. Elks No. 777.

The funeral will take place at 9 o'clock on Friday, service in St. John's Roman Catholic Church, interment in St. John's cemetery.

OPIUM ONCE.

Mildred, widow of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hart, were separated on an extended tour yesterday.

GUNN HUNTING.

Clude Trout, J. Frank Kenney and Tom McNight, Jr., are in Somerset on a hunting trip.

ON FOX CHASE.

With headquarters in the Hotel Albion, Bedford, a large number of Pittsburgh hunters are on the annual fox chase in South Huntingdon township, and 20 dogs are being used. James D. Vining, of Bedford, is in the list of the leaders. No intention is had of killing the foxes, but they are going to be given some good chase.

LICENSE ISSUED.

A marriage license was granted at Cumberland, Md., to Miss Gertrude Elma Deutscher and Joseph Roy Roth, both of Scottsdale, on Tuesday.

"GOLDEN GOBLET" TONIGHT.

Commuting rehearsals on "Golden Goblet," the drama which is to be given by local talent for the benefit of the Young Men's Christian Association at the Scottsdale Theatre, have brought into the折衷派的 production up to a high standard. There has been one change in the cast from that originally published, the substitution of Miss Mae Flanagan in the character of "Madeline O'Farrell, an Irish cook lady." The "A" sale has been very large, and it looks as if the play will draw the largest house this season.

BROUGHT HOME.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Shorbolt of Evansburg went to the Mount Pleasant Hospital Wednesday afternoon to bring home their daughter, Miss Mary, who underwent an operation for appendicitis several days ago.

A CONCERT COMING.

The Black Conservatory Concert Company will appear at the First Methodist Episcopal Church on Friday, under the auspices of the Queen Esther Circle.

CHAPTER IV.

The Face in the Crowd.
Up to the present moment the two young men had been confronted only by a series of mystifying incidents, to be sure, but bearing nothing similar upon their face; and unless Van Vechten's more recent perturbation (at sight of the veiled lady) be taken into account neither had the morning's queer events borne any especial significance whatsoever.

But here, in the twinkling of an eye, was tragedy stark and grim. Only a minute or two ago and this man was pulsing with the perfect vitality of young, vigorous manhood; now the spark of life was flown—extinguished, as one might puff out the flame of a candle.

Both were profoundly sobered by the shocking end of their brief chase, and even Van Vechten's more delicate mentality was slow to accept realization. As for Tom Phinney, he merely stood gaping at the still form, his brain for the time being utterly blank.

The spell of horror was in a measure broken by a policeman's belated arrival. He stooped and turned up the man's face, and a thin crimson line could be seen staining the left temple. The features were composed as if death had been kind and mercifully swift.

"Blugged," was the officer's sententious conclusion. Standing upright, he shot a glance round the crowd. "Who saw this done?" he roughly demanded.

Nobody replied; only an uneasy stirring undulated through the small gathering, which promptly settled again into silent somnolence; and the blue-coat, as usually happens in such cases, sought to cover with rudeness his incompetency to handle the situation.

It was at about this juncture, Van Vechten forever afterwards remembered, that he first became aware of the face. He was standing behind Tom, a bit to his left, and opposite the open mouth. His entire attention, naturally enough, up to this time had been absorbed by the girl at his feet. It was all the more strange, therefore, that his mind should have been attracted and held elsewhere, even temporarily. But nevertheless, all at once he experienced an indescribable, irresistible impulse to glance upward at a certain point in the ring of onlookers. And his regard came to rest upon particular face.

Straightway he became sensible of an unfamiliar thrill, an abrupt quickening of the pulse, for which he could not in the least account.

Perhaps he would have looked away again at once had there not come to him, as instantaneously as had the impulse, to glance upward, a conviction that this face signified something far out of the ordinary. The present circumstances might in a measure account for the horror mirrored there, but not for the despair, the terror, which seemed gradually to be chilling the face's owner into a statue of ice. The face, Van Vechten told himself, was reflecting emotions of a depth and potency for which the man's death alone was wholly inadequate to account.

"My God! Don't—Don't Look at Me Like That!"

count; the fixed stare was directed at something beyond and behind the lifeless figure.

It was a girl's face. It was refined and delicate of contour, and was framed in a nimbus of wavy midnight hair. It was, moreover, a strikingly beautiful face—even haughtily beautiful, for it was a face which the beholder would not be likely to forget for many and many a day. Van Vechten knew that he had never seen the girl before, still there was something about her that teased and perplexed him.

He knew dimly, later, that she must have been slender and not very tall, for she was standing in the paved alley, on the crowd's outward edge, and it was only an accident of relative positions that afforded her an unobstructed view.

Van Vechten's manner was no deliberate and grave that Tom favored him with a questioning stare.

"Very sure, Ruddy," was the prompt and hearty response—"if it's as serious as all that. You know her—what?" "No, I don't. But I think that I should—which is quite a different thing."

He knew that one phase of the morning's happenings would not be too much for Tom to keep to himself, and for some unexplained reason Van Vechten wanted it to be the mysterious lady of the taxi-cab.

As they were turning into the Powhatan granite archway, Van Vechten bent an inquisitive glance toward Number 1313. His curiosity was now immeasurably augmented by a fresh interest. And he received another shock—one that fairly staggered him.

For the first time in all the months that he had surveyed the silent facade, he caught a movement at one of the blinds. It was drawn aside, and he was afforded a momentary glimpse of a girl's face—the face of the girl in the crowd.

But it was not this circumstance alone that stirred him. She was gazing directly at him with a look that was both bitterly scornful and accusing. In this new vision the face was even more beautiful than he had dared hope for. But why should she be withholding him with a look of contemptuous disdain and rebuke? He had never in all his life seen her face before this day.

He was actually stung to an involuntary expression of protest. "My God! Don't—don't look at me like that!"

"Er—what?" Tom jerked out, swiveling around and following Van Vechten's set gaze.

But the blinds were again closed.

"You need a cocktail," Tom counseled pitifully after a pause. "This thing of not going to bed at night so as to be up before noon has got you scratching and bruised, as if its owner had recently met with a severe accident."

This man was staring angrily at the girl. He too seemed to be oblivious of the dead man, and intent only upon catching her eye. And then the magnetism of his look had its effect; her eyes were drawn to his, and she came to herself with a start. A tinge of color appeared in her cheeks; but Van Vechten observed that the terror and despair still lingered in her eyes.

"My dear fellow," was the composed reply, "you can't imagine how evidently correct you are in that conclusion." And as they passed inside: "No cocktail, though, thanks. And if you do not mind, go talk to somebody else; I want to think."

CHAPTER V.

Introducing Mr. Flint.

Whatever it might have been that Rudolph Van Vechten wanted to ponder in connection with the morning's happenings, he had no thought for the hourly procession of strange men into Number 1313, nor for the veiled lady (as much as her appearance had agitated him), nor yet for the murderer—if murder there had been.

His mind was flooded with dissolving images of a fair girl's face. He saw her shrinking in dread before an unspeakable terror, from which he could not shield her; he saw her sobbing out her heart in bitter distress, and it was not his privilege to comfort her. And then, most vivid of all, were the scorn and reproach of her handsome dark eyes, against whose silent accusation he could not defend himself.

His fruitless mental effort was chafing and fretting him almost to distraction; his head ached and throbbed, his nerves felt as if they stood stripped in a storm. And a beautiful face, so luminous of dawn, floated elusively before him, plauding, rebuking, teasing, coaxing, hating, but constantly and always leaving him more and more mystified and hopelessly perplexed.

As far advanced as the season was, there still remained several weeks which, earlier, he had planned to spend with the Carters. Fred Carter owned a pleasant summer home on the north shore of Long Island, and a comfortable sailing-yacht which Tom Phinney delighted to navigate up and down the sound, while the other dined, made merry or took advantage of the cool breezes to sleep. He often regretted that he must forego Tommy's cheerful habit of every now and then poking his head in at the cabin skylight and shouting directions to the bridge-pumpers below—who, as everyone knows, always enjoy that sort of thing. He would invariably vanish before the only available risqué could annihilate him, and become immersed in some profundity of his self-imposed duties.

He watched a second officer and the young surgeon leap nimbly down; the first to join his comrade in holding the crowd in check, the other to render such aid to the stricken man as any faint indication of life might call for. The motionless figure, however, was beyond the reach of any surgeon's skill; it required but a cursory inspection to determine this.

Van Vechten saw, hazily, the young physician indicate the mark on the man's temple, and lay the tip of a forefinger upon another spot behind the lost ear, the while he talked in undertones to the two policemen. Then the crowd quieted, and he had an opportunity to look at the girl again.

It was with something of a shock that he realized she was no longer confronting him. His glance flew quickly hither and thither—even hoping for the sandy-haired man, as a sort of clue—but she was nowhere to be seen. Both had vanished.

The ambulance was now departing with its silent burden, the crowd was dissolving or breaking up into little groups to discuss the tragedy, and the two friends were walking at a leisurely pace back to the Powhatan. Once more to themselves, and Tom Phinney's voluntary returned.

"Why the dickens didn't you want to tell him what you know?" he demanded.

The answer was uttered softly. "Tom, whatever reasons I may have, I couldn't put into words. At least, I didn't attempt to just now. You surely know what a 'hunch' is; your scheme of life seems largely to be governed by them."

"Huh!" grunted Tom, without understanding, but inadvertently hitting upon a part of the reason for his friend's reticence. "It is the veiled lady in the taxi; you think you are on the scent of an adventure, Ruddy! No adventure there. She was a lady, I can tell you that."

The other gave him a sharp glance, as if estimating the degree of his pernickety. How much could Tom tell?

"Tom"—after a moment, "if you must talk—and I know your limitations as compared with your intentions—promise me that you will not mention the lady in the taxi—to anybody."

He frowned with annoyance. Why couldn't such a sensible girl come home at the proper time, when all arrangements had been made for her reception and her family and friends had every reason to expect her? There was one consolation in the absence of these friends from town; he was not obliged to invent answers to embarrassing inquiries concerning his dilatory cousin. But this was still compensation for stowing in New York by himself until Paige chose to notify him of her whereabouts and intended movements. He gave one moment of sober thought to the circumstance that he really did not know precisely where she was; if some sudden emergency should arise necessitating a cable he would not know where to reach her.

But he speedily dismissed this phase of the matter; it was no new thing for Paige to start off on a holiday jaunt without confiding her proposed

COKE MARKET FIRM AT $1.90 IN SPITE OF LIGHT DEMAND

Curtailment in Shipments
Because of Storm Keeps Output Down.

FURNACEMEN ASK $2 CONTRACT

Negotiations for Next Year's Business are Not on Definite Basis Because Buyers Believe They Can Do Better
by Waiting; Pig Iron is Slumping.

From the Weekly Courier.
PITTSBURG, Nov. 19.—Coke shipments early last week were greatly reduced by the storm which crippled the railroads and prevented them from placing cars so that much of the coke in the event could not be drawn. The curtailing in shipments resulted in many requests for extra shipments on contracts later in the week and early this week. Through them comes coke has been prevented from accumulating at a time when blast furnaces are rapidly blowing out and consumption is continually decreasing. In spite of very light demand the price of prompt furnace coke has held firm at $1.90 is the usual asking price, with $1.85 sometimes quoted. One or two dealers have been able to pick up small lots at considerably less.

There are no definite negotiations on contracts for next year. Furnacemen seem to expect to be able to buy at $2.00 or less, and there are some sellers who would be willing to close at $2.00. Foundry coke has decreased a trifle since there are some sellers at $2.50, but there are a number of sellers still demanding $2.75. The market now stands as follows:

Prompt furnace $1.85 to $1.90

Contract furnace $2.50 to $2.75

Contract foundry $2.50 to $2.75

Pig iron production continues to decline. The steel works are blowing out furnaces quite regularly and will have to blow out a considerable number still as it is well known that their pig iron production is running well ahead of the reduced rates at which finished steel is being produced. The slow down of the finishing operations has been so rapid that it has been impossible to adjust pig iron production immediately to the situation.

Among the merchant furnaces it is improbable that many more will blow out as the curtailing is already so extensive. There are 17 merchant furnaces in the two Valleys and only 8 of these are in operation. Two of these are running on ore and pig iron exchange deals with steel interests and it looks as though these furnaces would blow out when such contracts expire early next year. There is competition in the Pittsburgh district from Cleveland furnaces as they have a lower assembling cost than the Valley furnaces which is making up for the 50 cent higher freight they must pay on their pig iron to get it to Pittsburgh as compared with the Valley furnaces.

The pig iron market has been quiet and nothing has occurred to change quotations named a week ago though there are rumors that on a late inquiry these prices could be changed. Normally the market is unchanged, as follows: December, $15.50; basic, $12.60; foundry, $12.75; malleable, $14; gray iron, $14.50; oil Valley furnaces, 20 cents higher delivered Pittsburgh.

Small Tonnage Nod. Merchant blast furnaces booked orders for about 150,000 tons of pig iron during October, which is the smallest monthly tonnage sold during the current year.

IRON AND STEEL OPERATIONS DECREASE; OUTPUT CURTAILED

Finished Steel Is About 80% of Maximum Capacity; Rock Bottom Is Reached.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—The American Metal Market and Daily Iron & Steel Report will review the steel situation tomorrow as follows:

Iron and steel operations continue to decrease. Taking as representative full capacity the maximum rate attained early in the year, pig iron production is at between 80 and 85% of total steel production, and about 60%. These little represent that the average production of finished steel during the balance of the year will be below the present rate, but steel output and pig iron rates are destined to decrease.

Pig iron is showing a fresh declining tendency in all markets. Southern iron is now down to $10.50, Illinois ham, a total decline of $1.00 a ton in less than two months and bringing it close to the cost line for many furnaces. The Philadelphia market is notably lower, and the Valley price only eight of the 12 merchant furnaces in the Valleys are in blast and they are operating largely on old contracts, some of them being onerous with steel interests.

Bookings in finished steel are still lighter, and represent on an average considerably less than 50% of full capacity, but there is still some old business being filled.

Shipments of finished steel are retarded as down to the rock bottom consumption of the country, and while few expect a return to heavy operations except after a period of months there are fair prospects of at least a little improvement within 30 or 60 days on the basis that present shipments are below actual consumption.

Allowing for further decreases in pig iron production, the calendar year's output seems likely to exceed 21,000,000 tons against last year's record output of 22,726,937 tons.
